Washington, May 23.—A new extravagance in wearing appeal has been introduced by Mrs. Ormsby McCannon, who wears shaded shoes and hosiery to match her gowns. Mrs. McCannon first appeared in this new conceit in dress at the Bennings society horse races, when she wore a smart suit of brown twilted silk, the skirts slashed above the ankle to display her brown satin pumps, which were dark at the toe and shading up to a lighter brown at the top into the same tone as her silk stockings, which were also shaded as high up as could be seen through the slash in the skirt.

Miss Margaret Perin has been among the first to follow the fad set by Mrs. McCannon, and is wearing a gown of soft gray chiffon and crepe meteor cleverly draped at the bottom of the skirt so as to display dainty shaded gray slippers and a shaded gray slikstockinged ankle.
